

IN MEMORY
It happens when distance and the hand of hampering power has placed a barrier between friends that a spirit from the trammelled past seems suddenly to throb and become vitally alive again. So far and contemporaneously, the brook have felt during a surging of memory collections of the past. It was so prominent a member of the village at a time of simple, though they look back to a more civic consciousness, peasant interchange of from home to home, a far-reaching social consciousness world it seems, a period of serenity. TAXES
O. K. Boothman

The innocent, lowly infant, When he grows to be a man, Has to pay a lousy poll tax, If he can't or if he can.

And if he should ever marry, He is taxed again for that. Then he's taxed high by the doctor, If his wife gives him a brat.

He is taxed for everything he wears And all the food he eats. Then his income pales up his cares, For they take a share of that.

Whether he labors for another Or starts in on his own, Old man taxer, like a mother, Sticks to him through rain or shine.

He is taxed for gas and oil To keep boat or car a-going. Then he's taxed some more for fuel To keep the home fires blowing.

If he puts money in the bank, He's taxed because he does. If he puts it in insurance, Then he's taxed with legal fuzz.

And if he should buy a radio To soothe his aching head, He would sure be taxed some more For that before he went to bed.

They have made it prohibition So he cannot get a drink. Then they'll tax for malt and sugar If he makes it in the sink.

He has to pay a bloody tax On electric lights to see And, if, in paying, he is lax, He is taxed a lively sum.

No matter where or how he turns, Taxes stare him in the face. He cannot get away from them, Though he runs from place to place.

He's supposed to be a freeman, But he's just another one. Who is taxed and taxed and taxed To pay for politicians' fun.

The President says economize; The next breath, stop your hoarding! How can man do either, when taxed Till on the state he's boarding

Men have said the air they breathe is the only thing free that's left. But Congress, soon in session, Likely'll make us of that heref.

Poor man is taxed and taxed some more, From the cradle to the grave, when he's dead and taxed for that.

For his estate the tax men rave, And, if he's left a bloody thing For his relatives or friends, inheritance tax is charged.

Fire his heavenly way he wends, And I'm not sure, by any means, When the pearly gates are reached.

They don't tear his jeans For further tax and send him into Hell.

"HOUSE INSIDE?"

Supplied by Rev. Paul T. Sargent, Rector, St. Bartholomew's Church, New York City. Author Unknown.

"I have a house inside of me. A house that people never see; It has a door through which none pass, And windows, but they're not made of glass.

"Sometimes I like to go inside, And hide and hide, and hide, and hide, And doctor up my wounded pride, When I've been treated rough outside.

"And sometimes, when I've been in blame, I go inside and blush for shame, And get my mind in better frame, And get my tongue and temper the same.

"I meet my Heavenly Father there, And He stoops down to hear my prayer, To heal my wounds, and cure my care, And make me strong to do and dare.

"Then, after I am made quite strong, And things are right that were all wrong,

"I go outside, where I belong, And sing a new and happy song.

"And then I hear the people say, You're little and bony, good and gay.

"It's just because I feel that way, But they don't know the price I pay.

"You have a house inside of you, Where you can fight your battles through,

And God will tell you what to do,

And make your heart both strong and true."

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

July 16.—The sky has been overcast by lowering clouds nearly all day, but so nice and warm. The arrow on the weathervane points to the south-west—a most favorable indication.

All the farmers are now turning their attention to cutting the grass and making hay for next winter's consumption.

One of the Kennison boys on Curtis Hill has quite a paper route worked up through South Woodstock, Perkins Valley and West Paris.

Miss Julia Briggs of West Paris was a week end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Andrews.

Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Green and child of Bryant Pond called recently at Davis homestead, guests of their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Davis.

Letters received from Prout's Neck from Lester Felt and Harry Page state that business is good at the summer resort where they are working.

Frank Nash has been working for Charles Mason, the past week at his residence on Cole Hill.

The Wayside Inn on the triangle at the junction of roads leading to Bryant Pond, Rumford and Paris is receiving encouraging patronage.

Gayden Davis, a dealer in live stock, has this past week bought, swapped and traded hens, calves, cows and hogs. He says business is rather dull but he trades on a small margin.

John Cox is working with the section gang on the Oxford division of the Grand Trunk Railroad.

Many of the people here were most agreeably surprised to receive recent calls from Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Wood of South Lancaster, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Curtis of Mexico, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Thurlow and Miss Rosalie Thurlow also from South Lancaster. The Thurlows and Woods were former residents of this place about 15 years ago. They moved to South Lancaster that their children might attend Atlantic Union College, of which they are now graduates.

Mary Hendrikson, head teacher at Union School here, is attending Atlantic Union College and boards with Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Woods at South Lancaster, Mass.

Waldron Rider, who has been on a visit to Ryerson Hill the past week, has now returned to his work at the Benson farm.

Who can tell what tomorrow may be? Neither is it a surly which side will win out in a ball game. We have felt so sure, in the past, of Woodstock's dandy team "Stowall's Best," that when the report came of the news that the Jins had got them, that they had lost out to West Paris, we were incredulous. But it proved a fact. You will learn the score from other sources. But it will never happen again.

The Sprinters of South Woodstock waited in vain for the coming of the North Paris Scrappers, July 16, but alas, waiting was in vain. However the invitation is still good.

The superior prowess of the braves of Molly Ockett is acknowledged by every neighboring tribe who have met them in warfare at home or abroad, a record to be envied.

The gentle rain of last week made the gardens rejoice, for which all feel thankful. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

The "Goose Party" returned to their respective homes July 16. Their stay at Long Island proved pleasant and beneficial. The daily swim in the broad Atlantic left nothing to be desired. Reservations engaged for another and a larger party next July, 1934.

There was a mistake made in announcing the numbers on the sale and entertainment program given by the Willing Workers last week. The one we refer to was the remarks of appreciation which should have been, by their president, Mrs. Jessie Abbott. Mrs. Abbott has given much valuable time to make this event 100 per cent and we are glad to make this program correction.

Prehistoric Tools Are Unearthed in Germany

In the so-called Mosbach sand, a deposit from the Main and Rhine in the Diluvian epoch, Professor Schmidgen, director of the Mainz
(Germany) Museum of Natural History, found bone tools which date
from the days of the homo heidelbergensis, whose jawbone, found in the same stratum in Mauer, near Heidelberg, some decades ago, is the oldest known human remains, writes
a correspondent in the New York World-Telegram.

The finds include a dagger-shaped tool made from the shinbone of an elephant, and a similar tool from the hind leg of a wild horse.

The age of the deposit is estimated at from 600,000 to 3,000,000 years. A horse's skull, found near Wallertheim, Rhenish Hesse, can be pretty definitely established as from 116,000 to 117,000 years old. All have been placed in the Mainz museum.

Harrison's Inauguration

Nathan Sargent, one of the earliest of the Washington correspondents, who wrote under the name of
"Jonathan Oldstyle," says that General Harrison preferred riding on horseback in his Presidential procession, and "that, too, without an overcoat or gloves, although the weather was excessively disagreeable,
a sharp, cold northeast wind prevailing the whole day." In delivering his inaugural address, General Harrison "stood bareheaded,
without overcoat, with bare hands,
facing the keen northeaster, a full hour and a half, everyone but himself suffering from exposure to the piercing blasts."

Foxes in Tree Watch Hunt

Unnoticed, three foxes perched in a tree, watching the preparations
and start of a fox hunt of the North Chestnut hounds at Walton Hill, England, recently. The incident is declared to be unprecedented in English fox hunting. When the furred spectators were noticed the entire program was immediately changed. Hounds were withdrawn
some distance, and when a whip
was cracked one of the foxes jumped to the ground and fled, with the hounds in full cry. He escaped and the other two waited until the hunters were gone, then slipped away from the tree.

Oath Taken by Graduates

The following adaptation of this oath is taken by graduates of the College of the City of New York:
"We will never bring disgrace to our city by any act of dishonesty or cowardice, nor ever desert our suffering comrades in the ranks; we will fight for the ideals and sacred things of the city, both alone and with many; we will reverence and obey the city's laws and do our best to inspire a like respect and reverence to those among us who are prone to annoy them and set them at naught;
we will strive unceasingly to quicken
the public's sense of civic duty;
and thus, in all these ways, we will strive to transmit this city not only not less, but greater, better and more beautiful, than it was transmitted to us."

"How to Win
Men"

By CORONA REMINGTON

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNC Bureau

ALMOST on the verge of tears Claire Newton sat curled up in the one big comfortable chair in her bedroom. Her chin cupped in her hand, she repeated the paragraph in "How to Win Men," chapter 12, page 220.

"Men like girls to do as they want them to do, they like to feel that they are ruling things. Any girl who foolishly dares to have opinions contrary to her lover's—or refuses to do things he wants to do, thinking the way he thinks is inportant."

Well, she had always done as Dick Barton had wanted. She had gone to the movies when she had wanted to dance. She had eaten in a restaurant when she had preferred preparing a supper and driving out to the country to eat it in some green pasture, beside a brook. She had done everything according to the directions given in "How to Win Men"
and she had failed.

Here was the last day of the second week slipping into eternity since Dick had not so much as called her—and she had liked him, more than she would admit even to herself. She loved his sunny manner, his tall, wry slimness. She had thought that he liked her—a little perhaps. For weeks he had been so attentive, calling her up nearly every day, taking her out, sending her flowers and candy; then suddenly it had all stopped. And last night when she was at the movie
with her sister, didn't she run right into him with some girl hanging on his arm and looking up at him as only blue-eyed girls can look at men?

She brushed away the stinging tears with a gesture of impatience and flung the book she had been reading across the room.

Then she got up, turned off the light and slid into bed.

The next morning there were dark circles beneath her big brown eyes that gave them a tragic expression and instead of the staccato little tap-tap-tap of her heels usually made as she hurried along to work, she moved listlessly this morning without animation or joy.

"Miss Newton, what happened?"
asked Mr. Dedron, her boss, putting

ASTER CLOTH CAGE AT HIGHMOOR FARM

As the traveler from Augusta
comes over the hill near Highmoor
farm and gets a view of the place,
his attention is quickly attracted by a large white structure in one of the fields north of the buildings.
This is a cage made of posts, wire and cloth. This kind of a cage has been used for years in the Connecticut River valley for shading tobacco to improve the leaf quality.
In recent years hundreds of borders over the United States have adopted it for protecting their astors from insects, diseases, and
sun. This practice has reached Maine, where the yellow disease is sometimes severe on asters. Interested Maine florists might find it of value to inspect the cage at Highmoor Farm, and by leaving their names or by writing they can learn the source of the cloth and of detailed directions for the building of a cage. The cage at Highmoor Farm happens to contain seed potatoes which the Experiment Station desires to keep free of certain diseases that are carried from field to field by insects, particularly plant lice or aphids.

Moors Not "Colored"

Contrary to widespread misconception, the Moors are a white race. Their bronzed and sunburned appearance, the term "blackamoors" and later the story of Othello, all served to give the impression that they were a dark-skinned people. The Fourteenth and Fifteenth centuries were the golden age in Spain for both Moors and Jews. Their contributions to industry, science and culture are matters of world history and the evidence thereof still exists in Spain.

Unusual Restriction

City ordinances limiting height of office buildings are commonplace these days, but Honolulu has an unusual rule: grass huts, used by business firms to capture the old-time native atmosphere, must not exceed 600 square feet in area.

Ancestral Tomb Looted

Robbers looted the ancestral tomb of the Manchu Prince Tsai Hsun. All the costly jewelry buried with the royal dead was stripped from the tomb of Prince Tsai Hsun's family, and besides the pearls the robbers escaped with fire-jade Buddhas, eight Buddhas of solid gold, ten silver ingots each weighing 500 ounces (worth a total of about $1,875), and a large number of other valuables.

U. S. Birth and Death Rate

The birth rate of the United States was 18.9 per 1,000 population in 1930, while the death rate was 11.3. In 1915 the birth rate was 25.1 and the death rate 14.1. The highest death rate since 1915 was during the flu epidemic of 1918 when it reached 18.3. Both the birth rate and death rate on males is higher. Between 1915 and 1930 there were 750,000 more boys than girls born. During the same period 1,175,687 more men died than women.

What Shakespeare Said:

Wooling, wedding and repenting, is as a Scotch Jig, a measure, and a cinque pace; the first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch Jig, and full as fantastical; the wedding, mannerly-modest, as a measure, full of state and antiquity; and then comes repentence and, with his bad legs, falls into the cinque pace faster and faster, till he sinks into his grave. —"Much Ado About Nothing," Act 2, Scene 1.—Pathfinder Magazine.

TWO-MINUTE SERMON
(BY REV. GEORGE HENRY)

MAKE BELIEVE

Don't pretend to be what you are not. Don't sail under false colors. Don't be a hypocrite. There is no sin so universally despised as hypocrisy. Even hypocrites hate it. It is the one thing about which they are sincere. They really hate hypocrisy—in other people. They talk about it so much and condemn it so severely that one hesitates to mention it lest he should be classed with them. It is notorious that men of the world who are always talking about "the hypocrites in the church" are themselves "whited sepulchres." They are whitewashed rather than washed white. Why does all the world despise the hypocrite? Because he is not a man. Because he is less than a man. Because when he might be a man he is content to be a make-believe. BE A MAN! This is the very core of the Gospel. You are not brute, but men, with the possibility of immortality. And we accept this Gospel with all our hearts, and yet there is no sin into which we more often fall than the sin of make-believe. Why is this so common? Because it is so much easier to PRETEND than it is to BE.

Chinese Wall Is One of Wonders of World

The Great Wall of China is one of the seven wonders of the world. It was built 200 years before the birth of Christ by Shih Hwang-ti, the first emperor. The Chinese then were famed for their advanced state of civilization. They had progressed so far that they became the envy of the barbarians beyond their frontier. The emperor saw the danger signal, and decided to build the great unclimbable wall from the sea to the farthest western corner of his empire.

He assembled 200,000 workmen, and forced them to work night and day to build the giant barrier against invasion. His workmen toiled unceasingly for 15 years. He had the foundations built of granite, and into the wall, made of boulders and burnt bricks, he threw the bodies of 1,000,000 of his subjects—"to make it strong." He built 25,000 towers and 15,000 watch towers, which he manned with a newly recruited army. Many of those towers today are being used for their original purpose—to keep out the invader. The wall is 25 feet wide, and crosses mountains more than a mile high. It begins 200 miles east of Peking, on the coast of the Gulf of Liaotung, and stretches westward to the edge of the Gobi desert. The giant barrier varies from 30 to 60 feet in height, and has a massive parapet on each side. Montreal Herald.

Jefferson as Seen by Contemporary in 1807

There are a number of pen portraits of Thomas Jefferson. Here is one drawn by Judge Joseph Story, in May, 1807, when Jefferson was on his way through his second term as president of the United States.

Jefferson is tall and thin, of a yellow complexion with a fine intelligent eye. He conversed in a very easy, correct, and pleasant style. His language is peculiarly appropriate, and his manner very unaffected. The negligence of his address a little surprised me. He received us in his slippers, and wore old fashioned clothes, which were not in the neatest order, or of the most elegant kind; a blue coat, white worsted cassimere waistcoat and corduroy breeches (small children) decorated his dress.

The President is a little awkward in his first address, but you are immediately at ease in his presence. His manners are inviting and not at all stately. His voice is bold and distinct. He bears the marks of intense thought and perseverance in his countenance.—Washington Post.

Wrote "America"

If suddenly asked who wrote "America," would we be likely to answer at once that it was written by a Boston clergyman, a classmate of Oliver Wendell Holmes, that dear old man who spoke of himself as eighty years young? The writer's name was one which fate tried to conceal. It was said, by naming him Smith, but the Samuel Francis succeeded in re-claiming it from obscurity. In 1822, he wrote "America" set to the tune of "God Save the King," the British national anthem thought to have been written by Henry Carey, who wrote that familiar old ballad, "Sally in Our Alley."—Indianapolis News.

Scarecrow Contest

The English blackbird is regarded by farmers as a pest and many are the ingenious methods employed to scare him away. At Dunkirk, Kent, a contest was recently held to find the most effective scarecrow. The idea was to counteract with old clothes, rags and what not the angriest farmer. The competition was open to boys and girls of the village. A twelve year old boy won first prize for a fierce looking, arm waving contraption. Villagers acclaimed the contest successful, for said they, not a blackbird dared his fate around the fields for weeks afterward.

The daily press cites as a remarkable event the fact that the Chicago World's Fair was started by the light from a distant star. Simply proves that it does not take much to start something. We know of big family towns that were started by one little blond hair.

Oh Cynthia!

By NORMA KNIGHT

"Sometimes, he littered at her, "I thank you must have a past, you're so secretive."

The long lashes lifted and she hung him a glance. "Oh, I have! I have a husband and seven children in Phoenix, Ariz., and I'm so afraid you'll find it out!"

"It would make no difference," he assured her affably. "I have no intention whatever of finding in love with you."

The blue eyes lingered on him speculatively. "I wonder . . . it would be an interesting experiment in emotional power—but not! I'm too busy to bother with you just now. Later, perhaps."

"Go as far as you like," he said. "The fairest maidens of New York have tried—and failed. But perhaps a little Colorado desperado—"

"One second thought I don't think I'll bother with you. If I failed it would be a terrible blow to my vanity, and if I succeeded, Miss Nona would be heart-broken."

"Meaning—you'd turn me down?"

She nodded composedly. He laughed, but he was a little piqued for all that. The only son of John Ensloe, slated for an important position in his father's firm, esteemed in his own right, was not accustomed to an indifference so obviously genuine that he could not regard it as assumed for the purpose of interesting him.

A few days later Miss Nona spoke to him again about Cynthia's overworking.

"Won't you talk to her about it, Geoff? I'm sure she'll listen to you!"

"My dear Miss Nona, she's less likely to listen to me than to anyone in Denver. Haven't you noticed that I'm unpopular with your daughter, to say the least? I'm the only son of my mother, and life is still sweet to me! I'd do a lot for you, Miss Nona dear, but to put my head in Cynthia's jaws is a job for a braver man than I."

Having taken this determined position it was a little disconcerting to find himself approaching Cynthia on the subject after all. He did it on impulse—one of the impulses over which his mother raised her eyebrows.

Cynthia had come home late to dinner, more than ordinarily tired. "Does your head ache again, Cynthia?" asked Tenny pityingly.

"A little, Tenny," he said. "She and the little girl were alone in the dining room, the others having finished the meal before Cynthia came. Geoff, returning for the cigarette lighter he had left on the table, suddenly flared into angry speech.

"Come here, Tenny," Geoff said one evening, holding out his hand for her. "Your face has looked like this for a long time now. What's the matter?"

She came not unwillingly, but with no lightening of the gloom which enveloped her. "I don't like Cynthia to work so hard," she said. "Her head aches this morning—I know it did! And now she's telephoned she can't get home before I go to bed."

"It's shame, darling," Miss Nona said. "I'm worrying about Cynthia, too. She's working far too hard."

"Stuff and nonsense—her running that shop at all," the Captain said testily. "You should put your foot down, Nona!"

Miss Nona shook her head. "You know I can't do anything with her. Father! We've both talked to her. The old man is a mine of information, Tenny, barefaced foolishness, is the neatest young chaps I've seen. Even the Tenny child is the only one who has been changed in her eyes. She's too sweet to be a good wife, but she's a good mother. She's a good mother, and then she'll be as desirable as possible because some household task has been done for her."

OLD SPEC MOUNTAIN CHURCH ACTIVITIES

by Daniel Wight, Fire Warden

There seem to be numerous facts concerning the Mains Forestry Service of which many people are unaware. If someone should ask you the height of Old Spec Mountain could you give an approximately correct answer? This is but one of the multitude of questions which enter the climber's mind soon after he reaches the summit. It is, moreover, the one most frequently asked.

As far as can be learned there are three families into which questions can be divided. There are intelligent questions, which as a rule are asked due to inquisitiveness. There are unintelligent questions which are presumably asked for the same reason though at times this may seem impossible. And there are those asked just for the sake of asking. The latter class seldom appears at higher level. This is easily explained: there is so much chance for the first two families to exist at the summit that the third has been driven out. Even though a person may think himself worldly and wise he finds after the two-mile climb up Old Spec and a view of the beautiful panorama of lakes, streams, valleys and mountains, that he never has seen anything quite like it before and he would like to ask a few questions, intelligent or otherwise. It is possible that a few of the answers to these various questions would interest the reader.

According to the most recent survey the elevation of Old Spec Mountain is 4520 feet above sea level. It is, without doubt, the second highest in the State of Maine. Katahdin is of course the highest, being 5268 above sea level. The Maine Forestry District has a total area of 10,000,000 acres, 6,000,000 of which are actually forest land. There are 10,122,860 acres of land surface in the State of Maine. Figured on the basis of population Maine's forest lands amount to 19.5 ac. per capita. This exceeds the ratio of all other states but the Pockels except Florida. The forests of the State are the main stay of the transportation system. The fact and many others, are reasons why we should try to prevent Forest Fires.

During the past week there have been fifteen visitors at the summit of Old Spec. The trail is in fairly good condition. There are pulpwood operations below the watchman's cabin but there is little danger if one is careful and follows the new trail from the road to the foot of the mountain. The 50 ft. lookout tower is available for observational and informational purposes on all reasonably clear days.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

Boy Scout Sunday was observed at the Methodist Church last Sunday. Mrs. William Rogers Chapman gave a short talk to the Scouts in which she stressed the importance of correct family training in the lives of young people.

Dr. Wilson gave a very interesting talk on first aid to the troop Monday night and brought out some vital points concerning bandaging.

A feature of this week's troop meeting was a talk by "BH" Hall on Beavers which proved not only very entertaining but highly instructive.

A contest between the "Buffalo Bills" captained by second class scout Edwin Brown, and the "Kit Carson" captained by first class scout Howard Thurston was begun last evening. Points are gained through attendance in meeting, hikes, passing tests, etc. The losers are to give a supper and entertainment to the winners sometime in October.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL

L. A. Edwards, Pastor
11:00 Morning Worship. The pastor's subject will be, "Good or good for something."

Is there such a thing as goodness in the abstract? Can we be good and our goodness be unrelated to the world in which we live?

Some years ago a benevolent person caused a concrete walk to be laid in front of St. Lawrence Church, Portland. Someone viewing it said facetiously, "That's goodness in the concrete."

Until our goodness finds expression in some kindly deed it is of little value to the world, to God, or to ourselves. Goodness is not a negative quality. A man may never do a wicked or vicious act; but if he never does any good shall we call him good?

U. and who worked so faithfully with General Neal Dow the great temperance reformer, of Portland. It is expected that Mrs. Grace Howard and Miss Stickney of Brownfield will also be present. Miss Stickney is one of the Oxford County delegates to represent us as a dry candidate in the September election, opposed to repeal of the 18th Amendment.

All the ladies of Bethel who were privileged to hear Mrs. Leavitt last evening stay at Mrs. Chapman's home will surely want to hear her again. Please come and bring another lady with you. Refreshments will be served.

On Thursday, July 27, the Ladies Aid will hold their Midsummer Sale at the church vestry. Everybody is welcome.
